Gathering the palms

Milton Singleton of Bay St. Louis continues the tradition of cutting palms Friday for blessing at St. Rose de Lima Catholic Church in rememberance of Palm Sunday, Singleton explained that the young growth from a large palmetto tree is weaved into various religious symbols and baskets and kept in the home. He said, a piece of the palm would be broken off and burned as an offering during storms and sickness. "In 1947, our home lost only two pieces of tin from the roof and a large pecan tree fell, but didn't hit the house. My mother firmly believed the palm offering protected our home." It may be later than you think, as your clocks may need to be advanced one hour if you did not do it last night.

Day Light Saving Time arrived at 2 a.m. this morning, and it was time to move those clocks ahead one

April 15 is fast approaching, so if you haven't started on your income tax returns, it is time to get busy. I know there are always those who wait until the last minute and then run around in a panic trying to make the deadline.

Reports I have been reading indicate there are fewer taxpayers with refunds this year.

Taxes are necessary to keep our government working on both a local, state and federal levels.

Best of luck to everyone in getting their taxes in on

I am still receiving comments on Wednesday's arrival of the Amtrak Sunset Limited in Bay St. Louis.

In reports I have received from those who ventured to Mobile and Pensacola, Bay St. Louis had by far the largest number of persons in attendance.

I am sure, the fact that Bay St. Louis has just acquired the old depot and grounds has had a lot to do with Wednesday's attendance.

A big difference in appearance of the depot grounds has already been made with the removal of load after load of debris that had accumulated there.

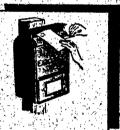

When the restoration is completed, we in Bay St. Louis will once again have a depot and grounds we can be very proud of.

There are many of us still around who remember, and others who have been told, how beautiful the area was at one time.

The Bay St. Louis election is scheduled for Tuesday, May 4, one month from today.

There are some who qualify for absentee voting, and they may want to get things going now before it is too

Those who qualify to vote absentee can apply at the clerk's office, or by sending a request letter to: Bay St. Louis City Clerk, P.O. Box 2550, Bay St. Louis, MS. 39521

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Return buffer zone land to full use by owners

This letter is in reference to the March 28 Sea Coast Echo article, "SSC officials issue reminder on acoustical buffer zone guidelines." The article states that the Stennis Space Center is the nation's premier large propulsion test facility. On October 26, 1961, NASA announced its intentions to build six or more rocket test stands to test complete booster. stages up to three times more powerful than the Saturn at what is now called SSC.

Three test stands were built and exist today, which tested only the Saturn and now the Shuttle Main Engine, which is five times less powerful than the Saturn.

Take into consideration other rocket test facilities, such as Edwards Air Force Base, Arnold Engineering Develop-ment Center, Marshall Space Flight Center, Thiokol, Rocket dyne and Aerojet; it is questionable if SSC is even necessary, much less a premier testing

Remember, NASA was going to shut down SSC at the end of the Saturn program, which reflects what Senator Stennis told the former residents of the SSA area in 1961.

That was that NASA would return control of the residents' property back to them at the of the Saturn program, this why most of the former ints elected to agree to an int vather than sell their the government, in addio the government was to take their land anyway. far as SSC testing in the other types of propulon the first of the control of the national Aero-tic in very unlikely, congressional budget in the low prionity

House this year to terminate ASRM. NASA states that the buffer zone is supportive to the other agencies located at SSC. I exposed this lie years ago. They say they are committed to maintaining the buffer zone, but allow exceptions to the restrictions. They say they assist landowners in the buffer zone and are good neighbors. How can this be when NASA prohibits the landowner from living on their property on which the program was almost terminated last year. There is a bill in the Senate and two bills in the landowner pays taxes? Hancock County has done well recently in spite of buffer zones, wetlands and tidelands. Alone, the buffer zone takes up about one-third of the county. At the rate things are going in relation to the gaming industry, the loss of the Army Ammunition Plant and the decline of SSC, what do you think when 100,000 acres of buffer zone in Hancock County is released will do for us economically and jobwise? On the other hand, if SSC wants to be a premier rocket facility, then they need to build rockets that will launch people

The lawsuit against NASA on behalf of landowners in the buf-fer zone is still pending on a judge to take the case. So far five different judges have been assigned to the case. I don't think there are any left in this district. The problem with the suit is that if the case is lost, it could render most easements questionable in regard to prop-

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Cochran sponsors disaster assistance bill for farmers

U.S. Senator Thad Cochran is sponsoring legislation to provide federal disaster assistance to farmers who have suffered losses from recent adverse weather conditions.

Cochran, a senior member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, joined Sen. John McCain in introducing the legislation.

Mississippi sustained severe damage to peach orchards and vegetable crops earlier this month ice and snow storm hit the state, bringing freezing temperatures, blizzard-like conditions and tornadoes," Cochran said. The cold temperatures killed at least 80 percent of Mississippi's peach crop and the entire blueberry crop, and caused significant damage to the early season vegetable crops.

"It is estimated that losses will be in excess of $18 million in Mississippi alone," Cochran said.

The bill will allow farmers with crop losses in the first three months of this year to apply for disaster assistance under the same terms and conditions of previous farm disaster programs that were authorized for 1990, 1991 and 1992.

"The fact that no crop insuris available for many of the producers suffering losses makes the enactment of the bill even more critical," Cochran

The bill gives the Secretary of Agriculture authority to use previously authorized funds intended for agricultural disaster relief, Cochran said.

Base closure: A mixed bag road toward base closure. For Mississippi, it's a mixed bag. For some other states, it's downright devastating. And, for America, it's an unwise step to cut so deeply and so quickly. Mississippians faced down the base closure axe two years ago and came out unscathed after a tough battle. This year, the battle will be even tougher for us. The stakes are getting closures. We are fortunate that this time only one Mississippi base is under consideration for closure and we can concentrate all of our efforts to saving that base - Meridian Naval Air Station.

higher with each round of

The merits of Meridian are strong. It is the newest of the Navy's four flight training bases and it is one of only two advanced strike training centers for Navy bomber aviators. It was built especially for flight training. It has nearly 13,000 acres and a flight approach that is well away from any civilian residents. I believe that it is the Navy's best designed and least expendable strike training base. Meridian is of tremendous value to both military readiness and the economy of Lauderdale

Our other Navy base — Nav-al Station Pascagoula — fared better after surviving the closure process two years ago. Homeport Pascagoula could receive as many as three additional frigates as a result of proposed base closings else-

America is once again where. However, one or more of embarking down the difficult those three ships could be decommissioned under plans to shrink the size of the Navy.

Our two Air Force Bases-Keesler and Columbus— also escaped the Pentagon's hit list.

We must always remember, however, that the Commission still has the authority to review and add any base to the closure list. So, we will continue to watch out for all Mississippi bases as the process continues. One issue that was supposed to be considered by the Commission was the consolidation of the Defense Finance and Accounting Service. Unfortunately, Defense Secretary Les: Aspin made a last-minute decision to ignore Congress' intent that the future of DFAS be determined by the Commission.

A number of states have been competing to receive one of the consolidated DFAS centers. Mississippi and the city of Jackson have invested time and money in their efforts to have the old Jackson Mall chosen for Consolidating DFAS made good sense. Mississippi's bid offered the Pentagon exactly what it was looking for and was reportedly one of four recommended sites.

The Base Closure Commission should decide the fate of DFAS just as Congress had intended. The Commission has the power to override Aspin's decision and it should.

I'll continue to work to include DFAS in the process and to protect Meridian and our other bases from closure.

CONGRESS

Taylor questions funding of foreign drug research

According to several newspaper and television reports and members of Congress. there are federally subsidized pharmaceutical research companies that allow foreign companies to benefit substantially from drugs developed at U.S. taxpayers' expense.
One recently released report that has me especially concerned is the long-term agreement signed between the Sandoz Corporation, a major phar-maceutical company based in Basel, Switzerland, and the Scripps Research Institute, an independent science facility in the U.S.

The Scripps Research Insti-tute receives 75 percent of its operating funds through grants from the National Institutes of Health and other federal agencies. Taxpayers' investment totals close to $100 million a year.

The agreement between the Swiss company and Scripps Research Institute works something like this: In return for $300 million from the Swiss company over the next four years, Scripps will give the foreign drug maker rights to com-mercialize any or all of its research. In effect, Americans pay for the research while the Swiss company reaps all the benefits.

Don't get me wrong. I am all in favor of encouraging co-developed pharmaceutical research. But if U.S. taxpayers' pay for the research, I would hope the price of drugs would reflect our investment. In the Swiss/Scripps scenario, consumers pay not once, but twice in the form of paying for a heavily subsidized drug at a highly inflated price.

In recent weeks, the pharmaceutical industry has come under attack from consumers and Congress for the sharp increase in drug prices in the last decade. A long-awaited report from the Office of Technology Assessment which examined the pharmaceutical industry's research and development costs, said drug companies could lower drug prices about $10 billion a year if they curtailed their advertising and marketing costs. If anything, extra profits should be used to reduce the prices of prescription drugs we helped bring to the

I am not suggesting where or how pharmaceutical companies spent their profits. What concerns me is that $100 million a year in taxpayers' money will soon be used to subsidize research to improve the bottomline of one of Europe's top 20 companies.

Because of the Swiss/Scribbs case and consumer discomfort over drug prices, Congress has scheduled a series of hearings to review international drug pricing policies and to consider ways to lower the cost of prescription drugs to the public.
I am hopeful, that as a result of these hearings that Congress can come to some agreement with pharmaceutical manufacturers to reduce the cost U.S. consumers pay for drugs.

"We recovered approximately $5,000 worth of property and anticipate more, but some has already been sold, so we may not be able to recover it all," McNeil reported.

The case is still under investigation and Bay Police anticipate the argest of at least two more juveniles, according to McNeil.

The arrest was the result of an investigation by Detective Shane Corr of the Bay Police Department.

On March 31, police took into custody a 12-year-old who was caught driving a jeep around an area of Union Street. The child was found to possess 12 rocks of crack cocaine.

The child was turned over to the parents and was referred to the youth court.
